THE REAL REMEDY FOR "SCARCITY OF POWER."

There are, in round numbers, 8,000,000 acres of land under cultivation in North Carolina and 235,000 persons cultivating these acres, making an average of 34 acres per laborer. The State of New York has an average of 101 acres per laborer, Ohio 137 acres, Illinois 146, Pennsylvania 105, and Iowa 218 acres. Thus we see that here in North Carolina we have 3.5 times as many laborers per acre as any other state mentioned, but still it is the only one that is suffering from the "scarcity of labor."

Why is this? To answer this question we have but to glance at the census report of 1910. Here we find that New York has 4 1-7 horses and mules per farm, Ohio has 1-2, Pennsylvania 4 1-17, Iowa 10 1-3, and Illinois 7 1-3, while here in North Carolina we have only 1 1-4 per farm hand.

The reason for such abnormal conditions is this: in the states named they have awakened to the modern methods of agriculture and have left the old ship-shod, haphazard ways of their grandfathers. When they felt the labor supply lessening they did not call across the water for some Dago, Turk or Chinese to fill the vacant place, nor did they run up the black flag of despair. On the contrary, they say the solution of the problem, not in the assimilation of some foreign element nor by abandoning the farm, but in the simple remedy of mule muscle and machinery—and for us in the South also, mule-muscle and machinery is the solution of "scarcity of labor."—J. W. Barrett in Student Farmer.

Little Fresh Water in Adriatic.

Owing to the system of screening mountains the Adriatic receives but little drainage. There are only two rivers of any considerable size that empty into it, the Adige and the Po. The water of this sea therefore is very salty. Navigation is generally safe, although there are some dangerous points upon the eastern coast, and sudden, northerly squalls often lash the waters with terrific force against the rock-bound coast.

Future Career for Henderson County and Hendersonville Citizens.

(By Thos. J. Rickman.)

Editor Hustler:

When Henderson County contained a population of from five to eight thousand people and the village of Hendersonville from four hundred to twelve hundred, did you know that none of the inhabitants knew any such thing as poverty, suffering or serious deprivation?

The average rate of wages were indeed low and such a thing as a "union" had never been heard of. From forty to seventy-five cents was a day laborer's wages, while a clerk or bookkeeper in a mercantile establishment received from $16.00 to $25.00 per month and he made money for his employer boarded him. Such an expression as "high cost of living" had not been written or spoken in these "diggins." If you had mentioned the word "strike," or "boycott," "lockout," or the like no one would have understood what you were talking about. The only mysterious thing to puzzle the brain of common folks, that had been brought about, was the small County Masonic Blue Lodge, which had been organized in the town. It was looked upon with great suspicion by men and women in the common walks of life, and many rumors as to its midnight secret workings and doings were whispered in every neighborhood.

The unknowing ones, who had no knowledge, except whispered rumors, about that Masonic Lodge frequently had it hinted to them, in a most confidential way, that some unfortunate Mason's wife was liable to become a weeping widow, at almost midnight meeting on account of her husband having met an untimely death, in that lodge and his body secretly covered in the sands, never to be heard of again. Fortunately the past history of lodge doings, records no such unfortunate happening in the good old Henderson County capital.

Hendersonville was even then a progressive community for it had a school house, with Prof. Woodburn as a teacher, and even others of professional distinction preceding him. It had no street car lines, no water works, no electric plant, but it had a stage line running up and down Main street, toward Asheville, and Greenville, S. C. This stage line stopped at the Ripley Hotel, and branched out from there daily and Colonel Ripley was one of the proprietors and interested in the enterprise, which meant as much then, as the railroad does now. Main street was not paved, but it was covered over with a kind of white gravel and rarely very muddy—the side-walks were the same and studded with Aspen shade trees and a row of same in the middle of Main street. Four or five business houses around and near to the old court house were all that was needed. All the beggars ever seen on the streets there if you could call them such, would have been an organ grinder, with a bear or monkey, surrounded by crowd of surprised children.

The village of Hendersonville lay in the valley of Ochlawa and was surrounded by much overflow and undrained land—and did you know that this land belonged to everybody? Everybody's cow, hog, sheep, plow-horse, polled-in patch, everybody get dead-wood, kindling, fishing ground for all the kids, bums and some old ladies, with no one to let, or hinder.

Unemployment was a thing not then talked about and the single tax man now tells us that free access to the land will cure all unemployment troubles (so you see free access to Mud Creek lands and swamps cured and kept down all such troubles as beggars and unemployment).

The tax collector then collected something like from $8,000 to $10,000, annually as public revenue, now for city, county and all special revenues, he must collect something like $100,000, but do not for a moment think anybody would want to be put back into the old situation. When the children of Israel murmured at Moses and he sought advice from the Lord, the answer came back on the bank of the Red Sea, "Go forward." So has the world, so has humanity, so has Henderson County, so has Hendersonville, and so must we all, "Go forward."

In gazing on at beautiful Hendersonville and Henderson county, let us get for the future such vision as Julian P. Scott describes—

"I knew that I was gazing at the Heavens,
Not that we should love our country less,
But that we should love our whole world more."

More anon.

FLAT ROCK NEWS.

Mr. N. D. Hollingsworth went to Tryon, Sunday.

Mr. J. J. F. Brookshire has returned from Swansboro, N. C.

Much interest is being taken in the prayer meeting at the school house. The meeting Sunday evening was conducted by Miss Bell Jones and Prof. R. A. Reed, Mr. J. F. Brookshire and Mr. Belton Jones made very interesting talks on the Soul.

We are sorry that the youngest child of Mr. Ransome Hollingsworth is in the hospital and has been very ill, but glad to know that it is somewhat better.

Prayer meeting was held last Thursday evening at Mr. Belton Jones, and the next meeting will be at Mr. Crate Thomas' next Thursday evening.

The preliminary for selecting representatives for the school in the Weaver College Declaration and Recitation contest will be held Wednesday afternoon of this week. Those trying out are Florie McCall, Lucy Slattery, Nellie Slattery and Dorothy Hollingsworth; Preston Thompson, Norman Jones and Singleton Thompson.

Since the mid-term examinations another pupil has been enrolled in the High School grades, making a total of 16 pupils in the first and second year high school work.

The equipment is now being secured on an early date the girls will begin their basket ball.
